J. H. MACKELDUFF DIES SUDDENLY DURING THE NIGHT

Prominent Lumberman Of West Chester Succumbs While On Visit At Hartman Home.

J. Howard Mackelduff, of West Chester, prominent in the lumber business in Pennsylvania for 35 years, was found dead in bed at the home of his brother-in-law, Dr. H. M. Hartman, Springs avenue, at 8 o'clock this morning. He was about 60 years old.

When he retired about 9:30 o'clock, Thursday evening, Mr. Mackelduff was apparently in his usual health. He had been complaining recently of indigestion, but was able to be about.

He retired alone Thursday evening, and when he was called this morning failed to respond. Upon investigation, it was found that he had died during the night. A serious heart condition was assigned as the cause of death.

Mr. Mackelduff, who recently gave up his business interests, came to visit Doctor and Mrs. Hartman last Friday. He was accompanied by his wife, a sister of Mrs. Hartman. During the week, he complained of pains similar to those of indigestion, and Doctor Hartman had prescribed medicine and he seemed to be improving.

Mr. Mackelduff was a native of Chester county, but for a number of years resided in Hanover. In 1919, the family moved to West Chester.

He was associated with the Case Fowler lumber company, of Macon, Georgia, and for many years was district manager for that concern, having offices in Philadelphia. Before becoming district manager for the company, he was their salesman.

Dr. E. A. Miller, Adams county coroner, was notified of the death, but decided an inquest was unnecessary after he learned the circumstances of Mr. Mackelduff's death.

Mr. Mackelduff is survived by his widow, one son, Forney Mackelduff, of New York City, and two sisters, one in New York City and the other in Seattle, Washington.

The body will be taken to West Chester Saturday. Funeral services will be held from the Mackelduff home there on Monday, with interment in Brandywine Manor cemetery, near West Chester.

A number of persons from Gettysburg who hold tickets for the pageant are expected to attend.

P. L. "Happy" Doucett, Halifax, Nova Scotia, his dog, "Friday," and a companion, Stuart Sherwood, Rome, New York, passed through Gettysburg today on a hike from Halifax to Los Angeles.

C. Pyle, professional sports promoter, is planning to stage next year. Doucett, who carries a pack of luggage weighing fifty pounds, has his fourth companion in Sherwood since starting his long trip, three others having given up the trip.

COURT SCHEDULE OF 16 GAMES IS GIVEN OUT TODAY

Basketball Games Will Be Played In New Gym; One Of Finest Courts In Eastern Colleges.

With the mid-way mark in the football season reached, Gettysburg college today turned its thoughts to basketball with the announcement by Clayton E. Bilheimer, athletic director, of the 1927-28 schedule.

Under the captaincy of Fred Haller, of Altoona, the Orange and Blue is expected to have a formidable court quintet this season, with Challenger and Cockley, two stars of last season's squad, as a nucleus around which Coach Henry Bream should build a strong team.

Besides the material left over from last year, the coach has at least six of last season's freshman team from which to draw his dribblers. Cramer, Hoke, Klinger, McMillan, Gulian and Doyle, all members of last season's freshman team, will be fighting for berths on this year's varsity.

To Play In Gym

The battlefield institution will use the court in the new Eddie Plank Memorial gymnasium for the first time for basketball this year. This will be a decided improvement, from the standpoint of the players and spectators alike, over the abandoned cramped gymnasium which housed basketball games in recent years.

The playing court, which measures 50 by 80 feet, will be one of the finest in schools the size of Gettysburg. Bleachers to accommodate between 1,000 and 1,200 spectators will be provided around the playing space.

The Orange and Blue quintet opens its court season with American university, Washington, D. C., here on January 6. The remainder of the schedule follows:

January 11, Dickinson, here; January 13, Susquehanna, here; January 16, Franklin and Marshall, Lancaster; January 20, Juniata, Huntington; January 21, Penn State, State College; February 4, Franklin and Marshall, here; February 7, Western Maryland, Westminster, Md.; February 11, Drexel, here; February 17, Western Maryland, here; February 18, Navy, Annapolis, Md.; February 24, Muhlenberg, Allentown; February 25, Lehigh, Bethlehem; February 28, Lebanon Valley, Annville; March 3, Dickinson, Carlisle, and March 9, Bucknell, here.

Millich, who was the first member of the Birger gang to pay the supreme penalty for a series of murders and other crimes laid to Birger's door, went to his death maintaining that he killed Jones in self defense and that he was "framed" by other Birger gangsters.

Millich, when taken to the scaffold, read a prepared statement accusing State's Attorney Arley Boswell who prosecuted him of having been the real leader of the Birger gang. The New York theatrical producer was met at the prison by his wife and other relatives, who had come here to return with him to Broadway. They left at once in automobiles for a hotel.

Mrs. Carroll said the imprisonment of her husband was a "blessing in disguise" in that it had given him a needed rest and restored him to a good physical condition. Carroll declared he would go immediately to New York and resume his theatrical work.

GEOLOGIST ON STAND IN TRIAL

Washington, Oct. 21.—(AP)—Through geologists the government's oil counsel today endeavored in the District of Columbia court to disprove the contention of the defense that the compelling motive of Albert B. Fall in leasing Teapot Dome to Harry F. Sinclair was the danger of drainage by adjacent oil wells.

George Otis Smith, director of the geological survey, testified that in the latter part of October, 1921, six months before the lease was executed, by the former secretary of the interior, he sent a competent geologist to the district who reported that the situation as to possible drainage had been unchanged since the date of the executive order establishing Teapot Dome as a naval oil reserve.

SUSQUEHANNA AT 26 FOOT LEVEL

River Still Rising; Many Are Forced to Flee Homes Near Wilkes-Barre.

With the Susquehanna river at a height of 26 feet and still slowly rising, Wilkes-Barre and the Wyoming Valley were confronted by the most threatening flood since 1902, when a crest of thirty-three feet was reached.

All the low-lying sections of the valley from Pittston to Nanticoke are submerged and scores of families have been driven from their homes by the water.

Water from mountain streams caused considerable trouble by rushing into the workings of collieries yesterday, and though none were forced to suspend entirely, several hundred miners were forced to leave their places.

The river measurement at Wilkes-Barre taken at 4:30 p. m., by Milton Wentz, official state observer, showed a height of 25.6 feet, a rise of nine-tenth of a foot in four hours.

The sudden rush of water yesterday morning cause considerable trouble in the Firewood section of Wilkes-Barre, where police were called upon to rescue several marooned families with row boats. At Breslau, a village of 1,200 people on the Buttonwood flats in Hanover township, a majority of the families were forced to leave their homes. At Kingston several families in the lower part of the West Moore section were forced to leave their homes.

Several soldiers of the 109th field artillery were called on duty Thursday to assist in regular stable and armory crews in preparing equipment and the 100 or more horses for quick removal if necessary. The armory is located on a high section of Kirby park and is still four feet above the flood level.

AMUSEMENTS

BOXER REBELLION IN STRAND MOVIE

Those who thrilled at the Chinese intrigue in Lon Chancy's "Mr. Wu" are to have another glimpse into the cunning of the Orient.

This time it will be Tim McCoy, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer historical star, showing at the Strand Friday and Saturday, who will reveal the intrigue of the Manchu rulers a little more than a quarter of a century ago when a concerted effort was made to murder every white man, woman and child in northern China.

The Boxer uprising has been written into a clever screen story by Peter B. Kyne, one of America's foremost writers. McCoy is seen in the role of the American military attache at the Peking legation.

Claire Windsor, who played opposite McCoy in "The Frontiersman," is seen in the featured feminine role of a lovely young English noblewoman.

The cast includes such screen celebrities as Cyril Chadwick, Lawson Butt, Frank Currier, Emily Fitzroy, Sojin Kamayama and Frank Chew.

Menjou Film Is Majestic Feature

Adolphe Menjou is rapidly acquiring a reputation in film circles for discovering new talent and for creating opportunities for unrecognized talent that have given them tremendous impetus up the ladder of fame.

In his latest Paramount comedy-drama "Service for Ladies" showing at the Majestic Theatre tonight and Saturday, Menjou introduces a new leading woman in the person of Kathryn Carver. While Miss Carver isn't exactly new to films this is her first big opportunity. According to critics who have seen her work she is achieving definite laurels for herself, indicative of the further successes so many Menjou heroines have won in the past.

Charles Lane and Lawrence Grant also have important roles in the production. Others in the cast are Sally Blane, Marian Ivy Harris and Lotus Thompson. H. D'Abbadie D'Arrast directed from an original screen story written by Ernest Vajda and adapted by Chandler Sprague.

Four diversified acts of vaudeville are also a part of the offering at the Majestic for the two nights.

FORBES UNABLE TO PAY FINE

Former Director of Veterans' Bureau Must Pay $10,000 Before He Can be Released.

Leavenworth, Kan., Oct. 21.—(AP)—Col. Charles R. Forbes, former director of the United States veterans' bureau, serving 2 years in the federal penitentiary here, for conspiracy to defraud the government, told Warden White today he has no money to pay his $10,000 fine upon which his release next Thursday is contingent.

Forbes whose sentence minus 144 days for good behavior ends next Thursday has the alternative of paying the fine or making a pauper's affidavit and serving 30 days more.

Veteran Stricken At Meade Memorial Likely Will Die

H. H. Spayd, Color Bearer at Battle Here, in Serious Condition; Taken Ill During Speech.

Washington, Oct. 21.—Fate looked for a victim at the Meade memorial exercises here Wednesday and selected H. H. Spayd, of Minersville, Pa., 82-year-old veteran of the Civil War.

Spayd, a color-bearer in the 149th Pennsylvania Reserves at Gettysburg, lies in the Soldiers' Home hospital suffering from a stroke which physicians fear will be fatal.

Tragedy visited the old veteran while he was reminiscing about the great Pennsylvania general to the president, his cabinet, Governor Fisher and his cabinet. As Spayd, a past commander of the Pennsylvania G. A. R., was speaking of his honored leader, he slumped and would probably have fallen had not Colonel Blanton Winship, the president's military aide, rushed to his assistance. The old man sought to continue as the crowd applauded him. He said a few more words but could not finish.

Major James F. Coupal, the president's physician, led him gently to a chair. After examining him he wrapped his heavy overcoat about the drooping, thin shoulders and sought to lead him to a more sheltered place. The old veteran insisted on remaining until the conclusion of the ceremonies.

Then he was rushed to the Old Soldiers' Home hospital, where he rallied slightly. But yesterday his condition was worse and there is little hope for his recovery.

HIT-RUN DRIVER GETS 30 YEARS

Enid, Okla., Oct. 24.—(AP)—A sentence of thirty years in the state penitentiary was meted out here yesterday to a "hit and run" motorist who had mixed whiskey with his driving. John B. Cook, 38, heard the sentence passed by District Judge Charles Swindall, after pleading guilty to a charge of manslaughter. Cook's car struck and fatally injured Mrs. C. B. Ringgenberg, 27, and her small daughter here last Sunday night. Cook did not stop. "Whiskey is what caused it," he told the court.

SYNOPSIS

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beauteous orphan, who is coveted by hideous Count Ravoir. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravoir. She rejoins Fabien, and they live so extravagantly that Fabien is forced to capitalize a genius for cards. The King plays Fabien at cards for Manon, accuses him of cheating. Manon is deported. Fabien stows away on the convict ship, and later asks the Captain to marry Manon and him.

"Marry you!" exploded the Captain. "You told me two months ago that you were man and wife."

The Governor, who had been sitting with an astonished look upon his face, half rose from his seat as he asked, "Do you mean to tell me that you two are not married?"

Fabien's face must have expressed the consternation that swept over him, for he felt Manon shrink close to him and her quick convulsive grasp on his arm brought a full realization of his mistake. In the joyous thoughts of the new life that was opening for them, he had utterly forgotten his previous statement made to the Captain weeks before.

There was nothing to do now but face the situation. Fabien held Manon's hand more tightly and answered calmly, "No, we were not married, but we love each other and wish you to marry us before we land."

For a full moment there was a deep silence. Across the Captain's face one emotion after another clearly expressed his rising anger at being duped by them both and disillusioned by Manon.

The Governor was amazed into stunned silence. To think that Fabien had tricked them all by a lie. He blamed himself as an utter fool for having respected the so called holy bonds of matrimony.

It took Synnelet to break the silence. "That is good," he said, stepping forward. "That is very good, Monsieur; and now that we know the truth," he continued, turning to his Uncle, "There is no reason why I cannot have her."

"Right, my boy," replied the Governor slowly nodding his head to the nephew he never denied, then turning to Fabien with a slightly puzzled expression he said, "Since the girl is not your wife, she is any man's property, and shall be given to my nephew."

Fabien tightened his grasp around Manon's shoulders. His own stupidity had brought their dream castle tumbling about their ears. But he would not give her up. He had gone through much for her sake and was now ready to lay down his life if it would help her.

As Synnelet came forward to claim his new property, Manon cried out in terror and Fabien leaped at him like a madman. His hands went about Synnelet's throat. With a roar of pent up anger the Captain hurled himself upon Fabien and forced him back against the wall where he held him until reinforced by two husky sailors who had been hastily summoned by the Governor.

"I am sorry, sir," Fabien admitted to the Captain, "Let me explain—I am sure you will understand!"

"Throw this mad fool in with convicts," ordered the Captain. As the sailors bore him toward the door he fought madly like one possessed as he saw Synnelet struggling to take Manon into his arms.

The odds against Fabien were too great and he was thrown through the open hatch into the hold below. He fell upon the reeking, naked bodies of the half crazed convicts, and lay sprawled in their midst, unconscious from the impact of his fall.

CHAPTER XXIV

Manon was more terrified for Fabien's safety than for her own welfare. Her newly found love had completely shut out her former selfishness. It did not matter, now, what happened to her as long as Fabien was safe.

Sobbing—half hysterical—she struggled to leave the cabin. She wanted to follow the Captain and plead for Fabien. The old seaman had been so splendid to her that she did not realize how utterly hopeless any appeal would be since he had learned of their deceitfulness. No sacrifice that she could make would soften him enough to have Fabien removed from the hold of the ship. But Manon did not know this—she was sure the Captain would do as she wished and she fought madly to get by Synnelet who laughed and smiled in anticipated satisfaction and barred her way.

Manon's tiny fists beat hopelessly upon his chest but he only smiled in delight. He was much pleased with Manon and her fiery temper amused him greatly. Certainly it was an indication that his conquest would not be an easy one. However, that only added zest to his purpose. She was his property—there would be no opposition and he could take his time about taming her into sweet submission.

The Governor was well pleased with the situation. Before leaving the cabin he paused a moment and looked back at Manon as she struggled against Synnelet's advances; but he only smiled indulgently, shrugged his shoulders nonchalantly and walked away without interfering. It wa sno longer his affair. He had done his part, besides was he not young once, himself, and the hot blood of youth must be served.

Wildly and more fiercely Manon continued her struggle to escape from Synnelet, but with each effort her strength weakened. Her gown was torn and her gorgeous golden curls, sadly disheveled, were spread about her half naked shoulders like a golden halo of sunshine.

The nearness of Manon had aroused a passion within Synnelet that was fast getting beyond his desire to control. He had played with his beautiful new toy just as long as he could. Suddenly he seized her, brushed aside her arms and crushing her to him, kissed her madly.

Vainly Manon worked to free herself. Synnelet's burning kisses covered her neck and shoulders. His hard labored breathing fairly smothered her as she strove to turn her head away so that he could not find her lips. Then she felt herself lifted, bodily, in his hateful arms and carried across the cabin. Vaguely she sensed the easing of her body upon the couch and saw Synnelet's face strangely grotesque, as he leaned over her. Through a mist of tears his countenance seemed to become more and more indistinct. Shortly it disappeared entirely and Manon knew no more. She had fainted.

With the return of consciousness, Fabien sat up. His clothes were torn and his face and hands were covered with blood. He had not been stunned for very long because overhead he saw the sailors securely battening down the hatch cover through which he had been dropped.

It was a dark, gloomy hold into which he had been thrown, literally stinking with sweat and filth. Above the dim rays of a ship's lantern sent down a faint light that enabled him to discern the convicts, scores of them, chained like animals to stanchions in the ship's beams.

They stared at him curiously. His sudden advent in their midst had aroused them, for a moment, from their apathy of despair into which days of confinement in their foul quarters had cast them. One or two of the men laughed—meaningless laughs inspired by crazed minds.

Still in a half daze Fabien gazed around and became conscious of their curiousity, their mocking voices and the clang of their chains. It all tended to bring back a swift remembrance of his fate. Like a madman he lurched to his feet and climbed up the iron grating to the locked hatch above where he pounded, vainly. It was useless. His bruised hands were but puny instruments for the giant task. Even his shoulders pressed with all his strength failed to make any impression. It was hopeless. He was unequal to the task. With a groan of despair he descended into the hold, fell back on the floor and buried his head in his hands.

HIGH AND SUNBURY BATTLE SATURDAY

Game Will Be Fourth Between Schools, G'burg Having Won Two and Tied Third.

Plans are being completed to give the football fans who attend the Sunburg high-Gettysburg high football game on Saturday their "money's worth." Faculty Manager Lefever has secured permission from the athletic council at Gettysburg college for the use of Memorial field for the battle.

Prof. H. C. Stenger has consented to have his Boys' band on hand for the occasion, and they are expected to add quite a bit of pep to the game. With a band from Sunbury added, there should be plenty of music for the fans.

Coach Martin has been handicapped during the past week due to the torrential rains. Practices had been held in the gym, but when the weather cleared yesterday afternoon, Martin sent his men out on the field for a stiff scrimmage which lasted an hour.

From upstate comes word that Sunbury is coming to "do or die." Sunbury's chances for winning are brighter than ever. No less than eight veterans from last year's team are again in the lineup and they have yet to taste defeat this season.

This game will mark the fourth meeting of the teams. In 1924 the Maroons sunk Sunbury 6-0 and repeated in 1925. However, last year, the teams battled to a scoreless tie and Sunbury fans point to this as the turning point.

W. B. McIlhenny is Qualified In Every Respect to Fill the Office of Adams Prothonotary

William B. McIlhenny, Straban township, Republican candidate for prothonotary, scarcely needs any introduction to the voters of either major political party. Active in his party's counsels since he has been old enough to vote, Mr. McIlhenny has won and held the respect of everyone who knows him.

So well did Republicans think of his candidacy for the nomination that he was allowed to go into the primary unopposed, other would-be candidates apparently sensing they would have "more than they could handle" if they attempted to wrest the nomination away from such a seasoned campaigner as Mr. McIlhenny.

Although Democrats may say that Mr. McIlhenny has already been rewarded for his party activities, having served as sheriff of Adams county and postmaster of Gettysburg, it must be remembered that both of those terms were many years back when fees and salaries were much smaller than they are at present, and when more work devolved upon those two offices.

As a matter of fact, it is 34 years since Mr. McIlhenny was elected sheriff and in that office he established an enviable record as a county official, as plenty of older residents will readily recall. As postmaster at Gettysburg, Mr. McIlhenny established and put into successful operation free mail delivery and also extended the rural free delivery mail service. He was very active in launching the movement to secure the present public buildings. He has a consistent record of doing big things in a big way for thegeneral welfare of the public.

In recent years, Mr. McIlhenny has asked nothing of his party for his ceaseless activities in behalf of the various Republican candidates he has helped to elect. He has been content to give his time, efforts and financial support in various campaigns, asking naught in return. To elect him now would be only returning to him what is rightly his due.

Although he did little campaigning before the primary, having no opposition for the nomination, he has pledged his every ounce of energy to a campaign in which he plans to cover the county, asking support not only for himself, but for the other Republican candidates on the ticket.

If elected, Mr. McIlhenny has promised to devote all of his time to the duties of the office of prothonotary.

At present, Mr. McIlhenny resides at Woodside Farm, near Hunterstown, where he thriftly conducts a large farm and orchard.

Automobile Accident.—A party composed of Charles Rudisill, Clifford Bream, W. F. Gilliland, Sheriff G. R. Thompson and E. S. Faber narrowly escaped serious injury when Mr. Rudisill's big Buick car overturned after skidding along a muddy street in Waynesboro. The accident occurred Thursday morning, while they were on their way to the Hagerstown fair.

They had turned down a street that had been sprinkled and the car commenced to skid, the back part turning completely around, and the machine turned turtle throwing Messrs. Bream, Gilliland and Thompson clear of the car but pinning the others beneath it. A crowd soon gathered and the car was raised.

Mr. Gilliland was probably the worst hurt and fainted after the accident as a result of his wounds, he having sustained bad cuts about the face, head and arms, also hurting his knee. Sheriff Thompson was more or less cut about the face, while Mr. Faber hurt his back. The others escaped with a few bruises. With the exception of a broken windshield and fenders being bent, the machine was not damaged. The party returned Thursday evening.

Congress of Mothers Meet.—The thirteenth annual session of the Mothers' Congress of Pennsylvania convened in St. James church, Thursday evening. Preceding this session a reception was given the state officers at the Gettysburg hotel by the local Parent-Teachers' association. This was one of the most pleasant features of the convention and was well attended by the teachers and other ladies of town.

The evening session was opened with prayer by Rev. J. B. Baker after which the address of welcome was given by W. A. Burgoon, principal of the Gettysburg schools. This was followed by greetings from Mrs. Will M. Seligman, president of the local association, read by Miss Maude Miller ,secretary. The response was made by Mrs. George K. Johnson, of Langhorne, president of the State Congress. Miss Reba Miller sang a solo after which the president introduced the principal speaker of the evening, Dr. Jesse Holmes, Professor of Bible, Swarthmore college.

The president, Mrs. Johnson, spoke very favorably of the good work of the Gettysburg Parent-Teachers' association, saying that it was unusual for an organization to accomplish so much in so short a time and to have so large a membership as ours.

Friday afternoon's session was held in the Wizard theatre. The principal feature was an illustrated address by Mrs. Agnes H. Reeves, of New Jersey, special agent of the Department of Good Roads, Washington, D. C.

Preceding this session the delegates and many of the local teachers and members enjoyed an automobile ride over the town and part of the battlefield. To Mrs. L. D. Ott, chairman of the local committee, and Mrs. William A. McClean, acting president of the local association, much credit belongs for the arrangements for the convention and courteous treatment shown to the visiting ladies.

The closing session was held in St. James church. Mrs. Frederick Scoff, of Philadelphia, president of the National Congress of Mothers, dedelivered an address. Dr. Anna J. McKeag, president of Wilson college, also spoke.

The president after expressing her appreciation of the kind treatment received from the people of Gettysburg, adjourned the convention to meet next year at Milton, Pennsylvania.

THE LOST FRIEND

He comes no more
To my office door,
  My friend of a year ago.
We shall never meet
On the crowded street,
  Exchanging a glad hello!

Time was I thought,
As a comrade ought,
  That ever his friend I'd be;
But our paths have turned,
And now I've learned
  How little he valued me.

He passes me by
With a downcast eye,
  He dodges me when he can;
I saw him today
As I walked his way,
  And my one-time playmate ran!

So no tears I shed
For the friendship dead
  Of the man who is still alive,
But who comes no more
To my office door,
  Since I foolishly loaned him "five."

And I show no woe
That he let me go
  For the price of a summer hat;
But I say: "Let him keep
My five. It's cheap
  To be rid of a man like that."

Steamer Captain Found Not Guilty

Boston, Oct. 21.—(AP)—Captain John H. Diehl, who commanded the steamer City of Rome when it rammed and sank the submarine S-51 off Block Island in September, 1925, was acquitted by a jury in federal court yesterday of charges brought in connection with that disaster, in which thirty-three lives were lost.

The jury, after deliberating more than three hours, returned a verdict of not guilty on the two counts, failure to stand by a reasonable length of time, and misconduct and negligence in operating his vessel.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

MEN AND MONEY

HARDLY a day passes but what some ome millionaire dies. That's how many millionaires there are! But scarcely a handful of these get more than a mere mention in the newspapers.

Why? Well, for one reason, it isn't such a trick these days to become a millionaire.

But there isn't a copy of a newspaper that comes out but what you see mention of some man or woman who has died leaving influence behind. Tonight I read of a noted composer of songs who was killed in an automobile accident. Nothing was said about the money he earned but about the great good his songs had done in the world. For years and years, people will be inspired by what he wrote t and composed for their happiness.

Who can tell how much money Lincoln, Gladstone, Lee, or Thoreau left? Hardly enough, I should say, to pay an income tax upon.

A prize fight drew a gate of nearly three million dollars—for an hour of entertainment to the spectators,—but in a back room in some university laboratory at that hour sat many a scientist searching for some way to prevent terrible disease and to alleviate human suffering—for a mere pittance in money.

What has become of values in this world?

As the boy leaves his play for his book, what must be his thoughts? Must careers first be measured in money value?

No matter what the world's judgment of Napoleon may be, it must not be forgotten that he died on a rocky island of a broken heart, guarded by soldiers until the last breath he drew—and that when his will was read, he left something to every one of his faithful Old Guard, his close servants and loyal friends. Not one was forgotten.

That act was the greatest achievement of Napoleon's life.

When President McKinley was shot down in Buffalo by a crazed human being, his first words were: "Oh, don't hurt him!"

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

"Mother," cried the trembling little rabbit, as the report of the hunter's gun died away, "do you think one of our friends has been killed?"

"I don't know, Bunnikins," answered pretty Lady Love. "But if these hunters only knew what sorrow they cause all us little people, I think they would put away their terrible guns," and she looked anxiously through the bramble bushes to see if danger were near.

Over on the rocky hillside Danny Fox and his family huddled in their little den. At the end of the winding Trail in his Cosy Cave the Big Brown Bear hid himself, and to the thick top of the Tall Pine Tree Professor Jim Crow flew for safety.

If Mothers while their boys are young
Would fill their hearts with love
For little furry-coated folk
And birds that fly above,
Perhaps in later days they'd think
Of how, at Mother's knee,
They learned how all God's creatures should

"Dear, dear," sighed the little rabbit. "You don't think, do you Mother, that anything has happened to dear Uncle Lucky?"

"What makes you think so?" asked Lady Love, anxiously.

"Oh, I don't know," answered her little bunny boy, "But just suppose something has?"

"Let us not suppose anything" replied Lady Love, and with a sad smile, she hopped over to the telephone:

"One, two, three, Cloved Dell, Tinkle, tinkle, little bell," cried the worried little rabbit lady over the 'phone. But, Oh dear me! although she waited several minutes with the receiver to her ear, no answer came.

"Please try again," cried anxious Lady Love, as the operator called out, "No answer!" Still, no one shouted "Hello!" and pretty soon the little rabbit lady hung up the receiver.

"What can be the matter?" she asked, looking timidly at her bunny boy. "Surely Little Miss Mousie is not on a visit. And where do you suppose Uncle Lucky is?"

"Dearest me, I somehow feel something has happened to him," sobbed the little bunny. Hopping over to the peg behind the kitchen door, he put on his khaki cap. "You're not going out?" exclaimed his mother.

"I'm just going to hop over to Uncle Lucky's," answered the brave little rabbit. "Maybe I can find the Old Red Rooster. He might know where Uncle Lucky is," and with a hipperty hop, and a clipperty clop, away went the little bunny, his knapsack bouncing up and down on his back and his red-striped candy cane swinging from his left paw.

"Do be careful," Lady Love called after him.
"I'll be careful, Mother dear.
But aside each anxious fear.
I'll soon find out where's he gone;
Then we won't be so forlorn," and on hopped the little rabbit, taking care to keep under cover of the thick undergrowth that bordered the Sunny Meadow. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Fearless Woman Carries on Work of Exploration

By ELMER CLARK

International Illustrated News Staff Correspondent

New York (I-I-N).—Decorated by the King of Belgium for her courageous work in penetrating African forests after the death of her husband in the midst of their trip, Mrs. Mary L. Jobe Akeley, widow of the famous explorer, Carl Akeley, is to be further honored.

She has been appointed by the trustees of the American Museum of Natural History to assist in the development of Mr. Akeley's plan for a great African Hall for that institution.

For seven and a half months of hunting and collecting in Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika, Mrs. Akeley was her husband's constant companion and confidante.

With Mr. Akeley's unexpected death, Kivu, the volcano region of the Belgian Congo, Mrs. Akeley suddenly found herself the head of the expedition.

Determined that her husband's work should not be left unfinished, she remained for seven weeks in her isolated camp, 800 miles by motor and 100 miles on foot from their base in Nairobi. In spite of intense cold, continuous rain, inadequate provisions, and the reluctance and insufficient numbers of her native porters, she managed to obtain the material for the gorilla group which Mr. Akeley desired for African Hall.

Finally, she transported her outfit to Lake Hannington in the Great Rift Valley, where the thermometer registered 115 degrees from eight in the morning until four in the afternoon, and there secured similar materials for a group of greater koodoo.

Her knowledge of her husband's aims and purposes and her experiences in Africa make Mrs. Akeley's aid very important in the carrying out of Carl Akeley's plans for a museum exhibit which will record in permanent and artistic form the rapidly disappearing wild life of Africa.

In recognition of her heroic completion of the Congo expedition, Mrs. Akeley upon her return to Belgium last March was decorated by King Albert with the Cross of the Knight of the Order of the Crown.

Footprint of Ancient Roman Cat Saves Story of Dick Whittington

Ashtead, England.—(AP)—Thousands of English school children who have feared that they should have to give up their long-cherished tradition of Dick Whittington and his cat are once more reassured.

Dick Whittington was lord mayor of London in the fifteenth century. The story is told that when a scullion boy he ventured with his cat, his only possession, on a merchant ship of his master and so made his fortune.

Recently the lord mayor of London, Sir Rowland Blades, said that there could be no truth in the story of Dick Whittington and his cat for the reason that there were no cats in England in Dick's time.

There was more excitement in England over his statement than about some of the transatlantic flights. Educators thought they would have to change their stories to the younger people and rewrite the reading books.

But now comes Arthur R. Cotton, lord of the manor of Ashtead, Surrey, in the forest of which the remains of a Roman villa have been found. He says there were cats in England in the second century, and in proof of his statement he produces a piece of Roman tile made at Ashtead in that century on which a cat had put its paw while the tile was still soft, leaving a clear impression.

Because the lord mayor's house is within a few yards of the Cotton homestead it is possible that the cat caught mice in Sir Rowland's garden 1,700 years ago.

Cotton is having a cast made of the cat's paw to present to the lord mayor.

FILM BIRDS TO STUDY SECRET OF FLYING ABILITY

Surbiton, Eng.—(AP)— The dragon fly and the humming bird in action have been filmed by the British government with the view of applying their hovering secrets to heliocopter designs in the hands of the air ministry.

The dragon fly and the humming bird have perfected the system of pausing in the air, in search of food or otherwise, and the air ministry officials spent some months taking their pictures with an ultra-rapid comera. These will be analyzed by means of slow motion pictures.

The humming bird is considered one of the miracles of nature. It remains perfectly stationary in the air without apparent effort whenever it chooses to do so.

The dragon fly has two pairs of wings, one behind the other, which work in the same plane. When the front pair is up the back pair is down. In this facility it appears lies the secret of the insect's hovering powers, and with the wings in motion, slowed down several hundred times on the screen, aviation experts hope to make deductions which will aid man in finally conquering the air.

Treaty Ending Indian Warfare Signed Sixty Years This Month

Medicine Lodge, Kas.—(AP)—Sixty years ago this month marked the end of a great era in pioneer history, the termination of the Indian warfare which had harassed the invading white man since the Lewis and Clark expedition.

On October 12, 1867, fifteen thousand Indians representing the Kiowa, Cheyenne, Arapohoe, Comanche and Plains Apache tribes met a commission authorized by congress and appointed by the president and signed what is now known as the Medicine Lodge treaty. Under it the Indians agreed to end the frontier warfare and to stay within reservation boundaries.

A pageant was staged here October 12 in celebration of the anniversary of the treaty signing. Members of the original five tribes, white descendants of pioneer settlers and government and state officials took part.

Medicine Lodge, situated at the confluence of Medicine River and Elm Creek on the Kansas-Oklahoma border, long had been a favorite camping place of the Indians. When the government induced the leaders of the five strongest tribes to meet and arrange for permanent peace the place where Medicine Lodge now stands was chosen for the gathering.

The tomahawk was buried at a ceremony following the framing of the treaty, and the pact made then is still in force.

The anniversary pageant was written and directed by Prof. F. L. Gilson, of the Kansas State Teachers' college, Emporia. It depicted the arrival of Coronado, the planting of the cross and the Spanish flag, the Lewis and Clark expedition, the coming of early settlers, an Indian attack and the signing of the peace treaty.

C. C. Smith Admirably Fitted By Training and Temperament To Fill Treasurer's Office

Combining youthfulness, experience and a willingness to tackle any task, Clarence C. Smith, Mt. Joy township, is an ideal candidate for treasurer of Adams county. Although comparatively young, having been born in Mt. Joy township thirty-three years ago, there is a certain air of maturity and seasoned manhood about Mr. Smith which attracts and compels attention and respect.

Mr. Smith would bring to the office of county treasurer a wealth of experience and practical and theoretic training along lines necessary to insure competency in that position. After attending the public schools in his home township, he attended Gettysburg academy and Gettysburg college.

Topping off his academic and collegiate training with a course in the Pennsylvania Business college, Lancaster, from which he was graduated, Mr. Smith spent three years in his father's general store at Barlow where he was given ample opportunity to show his talents and ability for business. That he "made good" in the three years he worked for his father is attested by his friends and acquaintances.

Four years ago, Mr. Smith received the Republican nomination for county treasurer, only to be defeated at the general election in the Democratic landslide by H. J. Troxell, who emphasized in his campaign his service in the army during the World War. In the recent primary, Mr. Smith was again given the Republican nomination by a good plurality, and Republicans and Democrats alike are rallying to his standard in the hope of securing the election of such a moral and up-standing young man by a good majority. He is a member of the Mt. Joy Lutheran church.

Mr. Smith has assured voters of Adams county that, if elected November 8, he will move to Gettysburg with Mrs. Smith and their three children, so that he may always be able to personally conduct the business of the office and be available at a moment's notice when needed at the court house. He is now engaged in farming in Mt. Joy township.

Children of Ranges Grow Up in Saddles, Ride Like Veterans

Stamford, Texas.—(AP)—The qualities which made for pioneer hardihood are being bred into the bones of the younger generation of the range country.

Children begin at kindergarten age out here to learn self-reliance, by being allowed to take part in grown-up affairs. Everywhere they are riding horses and doing the work of the range with the cocksureness of their elders.

Recently Roy Spries, Jr., 5 years old, was helping his father load 20 cars of cattle at Maryneal. The horse that the diminutive rider was astride heard the puff of a train and wheeled suddenly only to see another train and whirl again. Roy, Jr., was dumped unceremoniously on the ground. It was a hard fall but he climbed back on his mount and continued working, with no word to his father.

The lad has been riding since he was three, and his nine-year-old sister works cattle like a seasoned hand. "She has a lot of sense about cattle," her father says.

O. W. Cardwell, of Junction, has a family of seven children, every one of whom rides a horse and helps on the ranch. He puts them on horseback when they are about 3 years old and his boys, 9 and 10 years old now, are playing polo with the cowboys on the range.

Tommie Smith, 10-year-old daughter of a Crockett county ranchman, has been riding since she was three, and for the last year or two she has been riding range with her father, who admits she can spot an ailing sheep as quickly as he can.

In San Angelo a group of young women who have been riding horses almost since infancy have formed what is believed to be the only amateur polo club in the west composed entirely of women.

Soviet Asks $25,000,000 Offer For Czar's Famous Orlov Diamond

Moscow.—(AP)—Does anybody want to buy a 194-carat diamond?

The soviet government has one on its hands, the famous Orlov gem, and doesn't know what to do with it.

The superb stone, probably the finest specimen of a diamond, experts say, in the whole world, now adorns the end of the Russian czar's imperial sceptre of power; but as Russia is now a republic of workers and peasants, the bolsheviks have no use for sceptres or diamonds, and they want to convert the gem into coin. It has been placed formally on sale at the state treasury. It is guarded by twenty armed soldiers.

The price asked for the Orlov, which the Hindus call Deryai-Noor ("Sea of Light"), is $25,000,000 but the soviets will be glad to talk "terms" with any American who really wants to acquire the massive stone either as an ornament or as a commercial investment.

It is as big as a bisected egg, so that it is hardly suitable for a tie-pin, ring or pendant. It might be cut up into small stones, but this, experts say, would destroy its value, which lies in its unprecedented size.

The Orlov is 34 carats heavier than the renowned "Koh-i-Noor" diamond, which forms a part of King George's crown of England. The bolsheviks say it is much superior to the "Koh-i-Noor," being the largest and finest Indian diamond in the world. It is pure blue-white and of Hindu cut. If an American millionaire cannot wear a crown, say the bolsheviks, he may at least acquire the largest diamond in existence.

Romantic History

The Orlov gem has a highly romantic history behind it. It is said by the Russians to have been stolen shortly after the conquest of Delhi in 1737 by a French renegade soldier in India where it formed an eye in a statue of Buddha. Escaping to Malabar with his prize, the soldier sold the precious "eye" to a ship captain for $10,000, from whom a Jewish money-lender acquired it for $60,000. An Armenian merchant named Lazarev bought it from the Jew and sold it to the Russian Count Orlov, one of the many admirers of Catherine the Great, for $200,000 and a "patent of nobility."

Count Orlov, in turn, presented the treasure to Catherine the Great on her birthday, the presentation being accompanied by a lavish feast at the Russian summer palace at Tsarskoe-Selo. Count Orlov received in return, Russian history says, not only the favor and affection of the famous Empress, but an annuity for life and a title of nobility.

Experienced As Banker, Farmer and Business Man, William H. Stock Would Make an Excellent Judge

A tall, gray-haired man, whose rather young-looking face bears a certain Lincolnian stamp, is William H. Stock, of Mt. Pleasant township, near New Oxford, who is the Republican running mate of H. B. Pearson, York Springs, for the office of associate judge at the general election, November 8.

Of judicial appearance and bearing, Mr. Stock's mental equipment is such that recommends him for the office to which he aspires. In business for a number of years, he has come to arrive at decisions by close application to the facts as they are presented to him, and that training admirably fits him for a position on the bench of Adams county's law courts.

Brought up on a farm in Mt. Pleasant township, Mr. Stock knows the problems of the farm as intimately as anyone. For the last nine years he has successfully conducted a thriving fertilizer business in New Oxford. Through his business contacts, he has made many friends, and all who know him are proud in their praise of his reputation for honesty and upright dealing.

He was a charter member of the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank, New Oxford, where he still holds membership on the board of directors. As a director he has had ample opportunity to exercise his powers of discretion to their fullest, another point in favor of his election as an associate judge.

Mr. Stock, always active in the New Oxford Lutheran church, has a moral bearing and mental equipment which qualifies him to an excepitonal degree for the position. He has never held public office nor has he ever been a candidate before.

Every Baby Needs Vitamins

Baby often requires special vitamin-nourishment to assure development of sound bones and avoidance of rickets.

Science has rightly given emulsified cod-liver oil, as in Scott's Emulsion, a place of premier importance as a help to perfect baby's nutrition and to furnish its growing organism with a needed abundance of rickets-preventing and growth-promoting vitamins.

Young children who are not absorbing a full abundance of essential vitamins, should receive, as an added food-ration, regular doses of easily-assimilated, pleasantly-flavored, emulsified cod-liver oil in the form of

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.—adv.

Kidneys cause backache? No! Listen! Your backache is caused by lumbago, sciatica, or a strain, and the quickest relief is soothing, penetrating St. Jacobs Oil. Rub it right on your painful back, and instantly the soreness, stiffness and lameness disappears. Don't stay crippled! Get a small trial bottle of St. Jacobs Oil from your druggist and limber up. A moment after it is applied you'll wonder what became of the backache or umbago pain.

Rub old, honest St. Jacobs Oil whenever you have sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism or sprains, as it is absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.
